

Talking about the "Mandela Effect"

Okay, tonight's random topic is (drumroll please) The Mendela Effect (wait...isn't that spelled mendala now?)

Hello brothers and sisters in Christ, I assume everyone here has heard of the "Mendela Effect", but if not, here's a quick link:

> <https://www.theodysseyonline.com/14-mandela-effect-examples-that-will-mess-with-your-brain>
[you might not want to read too much, because it will probably give you a head-ache, not to mention that it's not quite honest... it's a bit of hype.]

When I heard about this "effect" a few years ago, I laughed at it. I thought it was someone's joke. And then when someone started talking about dimension change and books being edited by some unseen force... and (get this) even the Bible's been changed by this mandela effect - I was like... wow? The Bible changed by a "dimension shift"? (which is an imaginary theory pushed by pseudo-science - including many a marvel comic and/or TV show or movie).

But, when it was being said - and seemingly proven that the Bible changed too, I had to investigate it and prove which it was for myself, because it wasn't adding up.

What I found is that all of the "changes" are easily explainable. Some are unannounced corporate name changes. Some of them are unannounced book editor changes. Some are movie edits that weren't announced. Some are logo changes, etc.

Here's an easy one - yes the "Berenstein Bears" used to be spelled with an "e" in "stein". And yes, it's not spelled with an "a" in "stain". Why the change? Copyright battle? Lost a lawsuit in court and had to change it? Who knows - the fact is that it's been changed and that can be proved if you go to used bookstores. Or even online ones.

> example of "Berenstein" books being sold still

<https://www.alibris.com/booksearch?keyword=berenstein+bears&mtype=B&hs.x=0&hs.y=0&hs=Submit>

> example of the new "Berenstain" books being sold

<https://www.alibris.com/booksearch?keyword=berenstain+bears&mtype=B&hs.x=0&hs.y=0&hs=Submit>

You can prove these things for yourself more easily than trying to find someone who accurately explains it - or at least that's my experience.

So, now how about that supposed "dimension change" that changed all of our Bibles to now say "wolf and lamb" instead of "lion and lamb" like it once supposedly said? Nope - also a myth. You say - how do I know or figure it out? By going back to the original. Meaning the original 1611 KJV with the masonic hand-drawings by Templar Knight Sir Francis Bacon and his team. You can see this supposed change in Isaiah 11:6.

> https://www.originalbibles.com/Zip/Zippy.php?../KJB/Zip1/KJV1611.zip?KJV1611_Part770.pdf

That is a photograph of the original - so it's not faked. Isaiah has always said "wolf and lamb" and that passage is talking about the upcoming 1000 year reign of Christ during the "Millennium" described in various Old Testament passages as well as a little bit in Revelation 20. So... Why do we all remember the "lion and lamb" quote? Well, that's a bit more complicated. I personally think masonic "clergy" have done a good job of promoting lions instead of wolves, because they don't like honest followers of Christ being like those of Berea and catching them in their lies - so they avoid the word "wolves" (or in this case the singular "wolf"). But, there's probably more to it. One of my friends suggested it comes from an Apocryphal book (mostly a collection of lying books from the Vatican vaults pretended to be "lost books of the Bible"). I searched as best as I could and I couldn't find any evidence for this. But... it comes from somewhere other than the Bible. At least the direct quote does. But, to be clear, we are all familiar with a passage (usually people can't name it) in the Old Testament where Jesus is called the Lion of Judah... but God also gives the imagery of roaring/raging/destructive lion to satan in 1st Peter. So, just be careful if you use that imagery - for satanists it means something far different than what God does. The satanist CS Lewis is a good example of the satanic form of the lion (which is a masonry symbol).

As for topic, Snopes got it wrong too (imagine that?) - or shall I say, they only got it half right?

> <https://www.snopes.com/news/2016/07/24/the-mandela-effect/>

-- Did you see that first line "collective misremembering"? That's not accurate - some things have changed by individual corporations, etc - but that is not the supposed "Mandela Effect". Two very different things. Sorry snopes - you got it wrong again (or were you trying to get this one wrong too?)

So, the conclusion - why? Why does this theory exist? I have tried to help people realize that the whole theory is a lie - when pushed by atheist/satanist Steven Hawking or some "superhero" or media pundit - the theory is a lie, just like the lying religion of "evolution". So, why does it exist? For the same reason the deceptive theories exist - like the "newly discovered" deceptions on "History" channel or "Discovery" channel, or by the often indecent "National Geographic". For the same reason archaeology digs only tell you about things that confuse the Bible - same with "science". Same with the "newest discovery" from the Vatican or Oxford (same thing) of the "oldest fragments"... it's all to blur you.

Think about it. If you could look at old photos or news clippings or books and figure out what really happened back there, or prove that your Bible is 100% accurate when translated rightly from the "Textus Receptus" and things like that - wouldn't that help you hold to truth better? Yes, and for good reason, because you have accurate facts to stand on. And accurate facts to stand on also help people prosecute satan's leaders or at very least catch his lies. For instance, if/when you realize that the Vatican and NWO leaders kept Hitler and his top men alive to keep marching forward their Jesuit propaganda and agendas... would you believe the fake news anymore? How about when you realize that yes NASA faked the moon video, but that we've been to the moon numerous times - that would help you see through the propaganda, yes? Did you realized how every year we lose more information from our history books and encyclopedias, and even maps... and if you go back and look at the old history books, you can find more info than the modern "history" books - would you trust the "updated" Vatican news and history and science? No. Why? Because you'd realize how completely the whole system of modern "experts" are collectively agreeing to lie to you to keep you from knowing actual history and even more, making sure you are educating others so we can work as a team to be in the way of satan's team repeating the evil Inquisitions/crusades, etc. That is why "blur factors" such as the "Mandela Effect" or the "Scopes Trial" the real scheme that happened at 9/11, etc - or the easily disproved "Flat Earth Theory" and other psyops are promoted by the top Operation Mockingbird agents like Mormon Glenn Beck or mason/satanist Alex Jones and atheist Mike Adams and atheist/satanist Follywood actors, as well as the more subtle lies and half-truths of the FEMA (often masonic) clergy.

S, who can we trust? The Bible. It is and always will be the best fact-checker for all time, because God and His Word help people test the motivations and intents of the heart, found in the words that come from the abundance of the heart.

Please do yourself (and all of us) a favor (I'm learning this more solidly too) - don't throw out the information you know now, because some "new" information comes out. If it's true, then adjust to it - but if it has cracks, hold off on swallowing the latest lie that your leader says you need to accept. The Bible teaches about holding onto truth, because it's tangible and satan is always trying to take more of it from us. When we stay diligently in the Word and prayer and asking God for wisdom, God helps us hold onto truth, but when we let our minds be "retaught" while we watch trash called "entertainment" with an open-mind, we're losing truth, because of our wants for sin. The more we become dead to our wants for sin, the more we can hold onto truth and to become faithful servants of Christ and Biblical protectors as His Word teaches us to do.

~ I pray this helps some people sort through some popular lies that have made it harder to figure out truth from error.

~ Watching, Preaching, Praying, your growing bro, SH with the FEDBP and INCPU ministry teams